

If you were to open a Shopify store, what would you sell and why?

If I were to open a Shopify store, I would probably combine two trending things: handmade products and experience. Or, more precisely, handmade ceramics + ceramics workshops. Even though I don't have enough experience in making something out of clay, I know just the right people to work with! And as far as the skill-sharing classes go, I can think of many different directions.

I would create a possibility to shop for physical items and choose online tutorials for making those very items. Tutorial levels could be adjusted by skill or age — for example, kids and adults. In addition, as the post-pandemic world gradually evolves, tutorials can include pre-recorded videos and live online and in-person sessions.

About Me

I enjoy working with 2D and 3D graphics, creating short animations and learning new things. I love being outdoors. Hiking, biking, camping, walking by the sea — you name it. Also, I am really into extreme sports. It clears my head and helps me look at some of the projects I've been working on from a different perspective. So far, I've tried skydiving, rock climbing and mountain biking, and I can't wait to try riding a motorbike.
